MISSION'S EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
NOMINATED FOR WOMEN IN BUSINESS AWARD

San Juan Capistrano, CA—May 10, 2010—Mechelle Lawrence-Adams, Executive Director of Mission San Juan Capistrano, received a nomination from Orange County Business Journal's sixteenth annual Women in Business Awards; an award presented to five Orange County women who have made significant contributions to their professions and within their communities.

An extraordinary professional woman in Orange County, Lawrence-Adams has made many lasting positive contributions for the Orange County community through education, preservation, and stewardship of Orange County's historic landmark and museum, Mission San Juan Capistrano—a place where nearly every Orange County student visits at one time or another.

Lawrence-Adams' success has been attributed to her vibrant personality, an attitude to get things done, an innovative mind, and a strong connection to the community.

Under Lawrence-Adams' leadership, working on behalf of the Mission Preservation Foundation, the Mission completed the stabilization of the Great Stone Church, restored the 229 year old Serra Chapel, introduced an award winning audio tour in seven languages, and developed a vibrant and successful education program serving over 57,000 students annually.

Mechelle is seen as an innovator, as she has taken the Mission from a once architectural artifact in need of care to making it a central part of the everyday life of the Orange County community for generations to experience.

Due to Lawrence-Adams' strategy of making the Mission relevant to today's Orange County community, visitors from all over the world are coming to San Juan Capistrano to re-discover Orange County's most historic landmark. Annual field trips with over 50,000 students learning about California's history, over 300,000 visitors a year, sold out Summer concert series, permanent and rotating museum exhibits, and an interactive studio for students make historic landmark #200 one of the most appreciated cultural/educational destinations in the State.

Awards will be presented Tuesday, May 25, 2010 from 11a.m.- 2 p.m. at the Hyatt Regency in Irvine.
